

Somewhere In Between: The Hokey Pokey, Chocolate Cake and The Shared Death Experience

Somewhere In Between: The Hokey Pokey, Chocolate Cake and The Shared Death Experience contains lighthearted true life stories from the authors firsthand experience at the bedsides of family and friends who were dying. The primary story, Aunt Jerry and Our Shared Death Experience delves into the in between time when Lizzys aunt was dying. While interning as a hospice social worker, Lizzy received a dreaded phone call. Her aunt with end-stage Alzheimers Disease had suffered two seizures and a heart attack and was in the hospital. The next twelve days were a period of intense personal and spiritual growth as Lizzy experienced her dying aunts point of view in the ultimate form of empathy, known as a Shared Death Experience. This story is the most extensively documented Shared Death Experience to date, and details what it was like for Lizzy to receive psychic messages from spirits and her aunt, feel her aunts physical pain and see parts of her aunts life review. Throughout the story, Lizzy explores what it was like to have psychic abilities for the first time and the conflicts that arose when her family did not believe her. In other stories, Lizzy talks about doing the Hokey Pokey at the bedside and how she answers funny questions from patients such as, Does Jesus like chocolate? For such a serious topic as death and dying, Lizzy works hard to show the reader that there can be light and laughter even at the end of life.
