

The Laugh Crafters: Comedy Writing in Radio and Tvs Golden Age

Twelve of Hollywood's top comedy writers speak their minds about the so-called good old days, and recall the outrageous backstage antics of legendary comedians. No one is spared in frank, uncensored and frequently hilarious conversations about the stone age of broadcasting -- the 1930s, 40s and 50s -- when advertising agencies controlled the programs, stars ran amok and writers were treated with profound disrespect, like a necessary evil.
