

The Lennon Companion: Twenty-Five Years of Comment

John Lennon 1940-1980 Here is the spirit of a generation-in a fascinating collection of comments, reports, interviews, reflections, and memories of John Lennon and the Beatles. Their music, films, politics, lifestyles, and the culture they shaped are all here, in a never-before-available record of some 20 years of pop history. Ranging from the critical to the celebratory, the preposterous to the prophetic, these essays bring into sharper focus who John Lennon was and what his art was all about, written by commentators as diverse as Martin Amis, Luciano Berio, Robert Christgau, Noel Coward, Lukas Foss, David Frost, Pauline Kael, John Lahr, Philip Larkin, Bernard Levin, Wilfred Mellers, John Rockwell, Ned Rorem, Andrew Sarris, Gloria Steinem, Kenneth Tynan, and Tom Wolfe. In this portrait of a time so new and so much in change, Lennon emerges as a complex, difficult genius. Often dismissed as frequently as he was overpraised, Lennon has become, for many, a transcendent figure. Former British Cabinet Minister Richard Crossman summed up why in a 1969 diary entry: In his strange fashion, looking through those spectacles ... he was, I must admit, the only person in all these programmes with a gospel, a hope and a belief.
